Ask HN: What skills do you need to become a high-frequency trader? - throwaway6437 Yes, there are tons of articles and youtube videos on high-frequency trading, but I'm skeptical of the BS they put out because I don't understand how these systems operate at that level. Some can tell me how to break down an ETF and get the best leverage off of it, but I really want to know what they do physically to move the market. What are the main steps they take? ===== zuzun The key words for HFT are continuous fast execution. In my understanding of HFT they basically have a large data center where high throughput computing is used to execute trades in seconds. I guess you can call it "faster than light". There is also a couple of software startups called Walk-in that seems to deliver on the same promise of fast execution. I'm not a HFT expert, but a friend who works at one of those companies told me that any trade on their platforms that can be done by a typical broker only takes a couple of seconds - if this is true, it would be a dream for many people. ~~~ throwaway6437 Yeah, I am not trying to become a HFT, just curious how they work. Thanks ----- simonblack If you want to know how HFT works, go and watch the videos and read the articles on [Peterson came into this one having only scored five goals in his last 79 appearances for the Rams. And despite preseason goal pace, Kornheiser expects that Peterson can only go up after his run of eight straight seasons with at least 1,400 rushing yards and 13 touchdowns. "I don't think he can do that again. I don't think he can keep pushing the goal post back," he said. "And the question is what is he going to do for a pay raise? You have to pay Adrian Peterson more than that to do it again. Of course, it takes a third of your running game away. You're going to pay part of your running game away. That's just the way it is." "If it wasn't for the Calvin Johnson experiment in Detroit
