If you use Photoshop, we recommend that you periodically check out Creative Suite 5e's Video & Image chapters on Adobe Books Online. These chapters provide practical guidance for those working in the video and graphics industries. Projects make changes on layers In a number of ways, Photoshop differs from other image editing programs. First, Photoshop has layers. They're like building blocks for image creation. When you save a file, you can combine multiple layers on an image, as shown in Figure 2-1. When you open a file in Photoshop, the main layer appears on top. FIGURE

2-1: You can use multiple layers to build a complete image. After you create a new file in Photoshop, you may want to add additional items to the image, such as a filter or layer with an image or text. You can open an image that's already been created in Photoshop with the tools in the Options bar, as shown in Figure 2-2. FIGURE 2-2: You can drag elements from the Object palette into your photo. You can work in several different modes in Photoshop, depending on what you're trying to do. All Photoshop functions have a corresponding View option, which is selected by clicking the drop-down menu on the Options bar. For example, you can edit an image in the Image Viewer, work in the Layers panel, modify your image in the Content-Aware fill tool, or convert a photo into a vector drawing. To access all the tools in Photoshop, choose View⇒Window⇒Workspace to open the Workspace window, shown in the left image in Figure 2-3. In this image, most of the Tools tools, including the ones in the Options bar, are hidden, although you can see two of the tools, namely the Brush and the Fade tool. FIGURE 2-3: Choose View⇒Window⇒Workspace to reveal the tools that are part of the Photoshop creative process. To see more choices, click the triangle at the left of the Workspace window to display a drop-down menu. Figure 2-3 shows the Options bar, where you find a few of the useful buttons. When you click the triangle to display a menu, as shown in the bottom two images in Figure 2-3, you can toggle among several different views of the photo. Here, the image appears on a new layer, the Exposure settings are visible, Differential expression of matrix metalloproteases and tissue inhibitors of matrix metalloproteases by human tumor cells. Cancer progression involves the destruction of the basement membrane and the stroma, which is followed by invasion into local and distant sites. Matrix metalloproteases (MMPs) and their inhibitors, the tissue inhibitors of matrix metalloproteases (TIMPs), participate in the degradation of basement membranes and the establishment of invading tumors. The activity of MMPs is tightly regulated at different levels by expression of TIMPs. This study addresses the pattern of expression of MMPs and their inhibitors in several human tumor cell lines. The expression of mRNA and protein for MMPs 2, 9, and 13 in human fibrosarcoma, liver carcinoma, astrocytoma, and esophageal carcinoma cell lines was determined by reverse transcription-PCR and Western blot analysis. MMPs 2 and 9 were found to be expressed constitutively in all four cell lines examined. TIMP-1 was expressed in the fibrosarcoma cell line and in two of the three liver carcinoma cell lines, but it was not detectable in the astrocytoma or esophageal carcinoma cell lines. TIMP-2 was expressed in all four cell lines. TIMP-3 was not detected in any of the cell lines. Gelatin zymography revealed that MMP-2 was the only enzyme with activity in all four cell lines. These results suggest that MMP-9 and TIMP-1 are expressed in most of the tumor cell lines examined, whereas MMP-2 is expressed in the majority of the tumor cell lines examined, with TIMP-1 being up-regulated in fibrosarcoma cells.Improved cytoplasmic function and decreased mitochondrial dysfunction in 2 major genetic forms of generalized lipodystrophy. Lipodystrophies represent a heterogeneous group of inherited diseases characterized by abnormal adipose tissue distribution and defective metabolism. Mutations in the adipose differentiation-related protein gene cause familial partial lipodystrophy type 2 and in the ACACA gene cause congenital generalized lipodystrophy type 1. Data on genetic-induced lipodystrophy models with increased energy expenditure and altered lipid metabolism are relatively scarce. In the present study, the effect of two inherited adipose tissue-specific mutations in mice was examined. Neonatal loss-of-function of the adipose differentiation-
